DURBAR MEETING
HELD LAST NIGHT

DISCUSSED DETAILS OF THE BIG CELEBRATION FOR NEXT MONTH.

BENSON IS IN TULSA

Chicago Man May Take Charge of the Work of Preparing for Durbar Festivities.

Plans for the illuminated night parade that will be one of the features of Tulsa's big Durbar this year, were discussed last night at a meeting of the Durbar association, held in the Commercial club rooms.

George D. Benson, of Chicago, who has supervised celebrations of all kinds for the past fifteen years, and who is one of the leading festival directors in this country, met with the association. It is practically assumed that Mr. Benson will be director-general of this year's Durbar. He is already at work, planning the floats for the night parade. These floats will be built on an elaborate scale and will be constructed in Tulsa. Ten floats alone will cost over $4,000. The Durbar association is to proceed at once with the raising of $7,000, which represents the initial cost of the Durbar. An additional amount will be secured from the sale of concessions. Reviewing stands will be erected on vacant lots down town, and the city streets will be thrown open to show and other concessions. Over three times of confetti alone will be ordered by the association for Durbar week.

"The magnificent oriental idea conceived in the Durbar," said Mr. Benson last night, "is one of the best publicity getters I ever saw. I am sure that with this scheme to work on, and such a live bunch of men as compose the association back of me, I can make this year's Durbar far greater even than most people now imagine it will be."

The Durbar is to last for four full days and will be marked by several parades, coronation ceremonies, confetti battles, a grand ball and many other features.

Drawings will soon be prepared of the floats that are to be built, and which will represent in tableaux the history of Tulsa.

ROOSEVELT AND JOHNSON TICKET

It is to be called by you to the leadership for the time being of this great movement in the interests of the American people.

"And friends, I wish to say how deeply I am moved by the way in which the nomination has come to me and to tell those who proposed and seconded my nomination that I appreciate to the full the significance of having such men and such a woman put me in nomination, and I wish to thank the convention for having given me the running mate it has given."

I have a peculiar feeling toward Governor Johnson. Nearly two years ago after the elections of 1910, when what I had striven to accomplish in New York had come to nothing and when my friends, the electors, evicted—possibly prematurely—over what had befallen me, Governor Johnson, in the flush of his own triumph, having just won, wrote me a letter which I shall hand on to my children and children's children because of what the letter contained, and because of the man who wrote it, a letter of trust and belief, a letter of ardent friendship from the soldier who was at the moment victorious, toward his comrade who at that moment had been struck down.

In Governor Johnson, we have a man whose every word is made good to the deeds he has done. The man who as the head of a great state, has practically applied in that state for the benefit of the people of that state the principles which we intend to apply throughout the Union as a whole. We have nominated the only type of man who ever ought to be nominated for the vice-presidency; we have nominated a man fit to stand at the side of the president of the United States.

Friends, I have come here merely to thank you from the bottom of my heart for the honor you have conferred upon me and to say that I appreciate it exactly as I know, you mean it. For the greatest chance, the greatest gift that can be given to any man is the opportunity, if he has the stuff in him to do something that counts in the interests of the common good.

I appreciate to the full the burden of responsibility that you have put upon me. I appreciate to the full that the trust you impose upon me can be met only in one way, and that is by so carrying myself that you shall have no cause to regret, or to feel shame for the action you have taken this afternoon.

And friends, with all my heart and soul, with every particle of high purpose that there is in me, I pledge you my word to do everything I can to put every particle of courage, of common sense and of strength that I have at your disposal, and to endeavor so far as possible to live up to the obligations you have put upon me, and to endeavor to carry out, in the interests of our whole people, the policies to which you have today solemnly dedicated yourselves to the millions of men and women for whom I will speak. I thank you."

inspectors not to give out the vote to newspaper men. The count on county officers was completed at a late hour tonight. The greatest interest centered in the democratic race for county attorney which was won by Al J. Jennings, ex-banquet, train robber and outlaw, who made a sensational torchlight campaign, detailing the acts of his past life and stating that he had reformed. Ringold's attitude in refusing to allow the newspapers to have the returns is caused by the fact that various papers of Oklahoma City found fault with him for his apparent effort to prevent independent canvassing of his registration, which had been ordered by the state election board. Ringold refused to allow any of them to re-register.

If James S. Ross of Oklahoma City gets a good majority in Oklahoma county, he stands an excellent chance of being nominated for congress in the second district as he is running strong in the other counties. B. J. Wagon, of Guthrie, well known in Oklahoma politics, has been nominated by the democrats for congress in the first district to oppose Bird S. McGuire.

POLITICAL IDEAS

and speak, as has been his wont, extemporaneously.

As it was, the governor interpolated an epigram here and there which drew laughter and applause.

"The tariff was once a bulwark, now it is a dam," the governor read, but catching the puzzled look of his auditors, added with a laugh, "You can spell it either way."

His audience seemed particularly pleased with his declaration that the question of governing was largely one of good faith and morals and that in the market of life where the prices climb higher than earnings, those who buy "are not even represented by counsel."

Governor Wilson added to his speech a pointed reference to prosecutions under the federal anti-trust law.

"The means and methods," he said, "by which trusts have established monopolies have now become known. It will be necessary to supplement the present laws with such laws, both civil and criminal, as will effectually punish and prevent those methods, adding such other laws as may be necessary to provide suitable and equitable judicial processes, whether civil or criminal, to disclose them and follow them to final verdict and judgment, thus overcoming in some degree the modesty of our courts in this pursuit."

After the speech the governor shook hands with more than 6,000 persons.

Governor Marshall will go into Maine on a speaking tour in the last week of August just before the gubernatorial elections there. Governor Wilson will not speak in Maine until after the September state elections.

Governor Wilson will leave Seattle tomorrow for New York, where he will have his portrait drawn by Seymour Thomas. The portrait will
